

Programme of events for the 18th annual conference of the German Council for Sustainable Development on 4 June 2018 at the Tempodrom in Berlin

As of: 31.05.2018

Many key developments in relation to sustainability are proceeding globally in the wrong direction – even in our country – or are not (yet) creating breakthroughs towards transformation. This year, the future of sustainability policy forms the focus of our annual conference. Renowned international experts will take a critical look at German sustainability policy. With the varied contributions of dedicated individuals and institutions and the ideas put forward by international experts as our basis, we want to examine which transformative signals towards implementation of the German Sustainable Development Strategy are present and what is still needed.

Through a diverse programme of events, you will have the opportunity to participate in topically oriented discussions and expand your understanding of relevant issues. In particular, the possibility for intensive discourse across many sections of society is a special highlight of the sustainability summit.

We cordially invite you to join us and look forward to your contributions!

Yours sincerely,

Marlehn Thieme
Chairwoman of the German Council for Sustainable Development

Forum 1:

New partnerships: a discussion with representatives of civil society, the Hub for Sustainable Finance and sustainable business

All over the world, sustainable business is making inroads, sustainable finance initiatives have sprung up in several countries, a CSR reporting obligation has been implemented and the trend is towards sustainable consumption. What is still lacking to achieve transformation? That is what we want to discuss with you.

Participants:

Sabine Pex, ISS-oekom

Thies Grothe, German Property Federation (ZIA)

Moderation:

Prof. Dr. Lucia A. Reisch, professor of intercultural consumption research and European consumer policy and member of the German Council for Sustainable Development

Prof. Dr. Alexander Bassen, professor of business studies and member of the Council for Sustainable Development

Forum 2:

New perspectives: a discussion among peers

Following approval of the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, the German federal government fundamentally revised its sustainability strategy and commissioned it to be reviewed by a panel of experts under the aegis of Helen Clark, former Head of the United Nations Development Programme and former Prime Minister of New Zealand; subsequent to its review, the panel will make recommendations.

These recommendations are to be presented publicly at the RNE annual conference. This forum offers participants of the annual conference the opportunity to pose questions directly to certain members of the international panel of experts about their work and their conclusions and to comment on these.

Participating peers:

- Helen Clark, Chair of the Peer Group, former Prime Minister of New Zealand and Head of United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)

- Adolfo Ayuso, Director General Agenda 2030, Presidential Office of Republic of Mexico

Forum 3:

New communication: discussing with the Science Platform

What contribution can the sciences make to processes for economic and societal change? Where are the hurdles; where is there resistance? What is the task of the Science Platform Sustainability 2030 and what service does it provide?

How does the Science Platform make knowledge transparent and accessible to society?

In this forum, the goals, topics and communication tools of the Science Platform Sustainability 2030 will be presented and their contribution towards implementation of 2030 Agenda and the German Sustainable Development Strategy discussed.
